MICA RESOURCES AND LINKS

The services of the Joseph Meyerhoff Center for Career Development are available to you as a MICA alumni at anytime. We are here to help you in your job search, to review your professional package, to offer advice in applying for grants and residencies or to graduate school, along with a host of other services. We offer appointments in person if you are still in the Baltimore area, or via the phone or skype if that works better for you. Whether you are a recent grad, or fifteen years out and contemplating a career change, we can help you get to the “next step” in your creative career.

MICANETWORK

www.MICAnetwork.com

MICAnetwork is our free online database listing opportunities from employers across the United States who are actively looking to hire MICA students and alumni. MICAnetwork also offers valuable information and tools for students and alumni preparing for their future careers in the arts, such as: information on career programs, internships, jobs, residencies, fellowships, grants and exhibitions. Students and alumni can post resumes and portfolio samples for view by employers.

ONLINE CAREER RESOURCES LIBRARY

We have been very busy updating and uploading the many handouts and booklets our office publishes to the Career Development page of the MICA website: www.MICA.edu/careerdevelopment. Here you will find downloadable PDF’s of our handouts on resumes, cover letters, grants and applying to graduate school. You will also find helpful videos on documenting your work, and audio/visual resources we think may be helpful to you as you establish your career, the residency database and our current program calendar with the dates and locations of upcoming professional development workshops around campus. Be sure to take a look at the Career Development Delicious links where we have bookmarked nearly 1,000 web resources for the MICA community, including links to grants, fellowships and residencies as well as nearly 100 industry specific job banks.

GRANTS AND COMPETITIONS SOURCEBOOK

Participating in competitive opportunities is integral to the development of a robust career and a balance to studio practice. Applying to any competitive opportunity requires a great deal of work, starting with research, preparing materials, and creating a statement of intent. The Grants and Competitions Sourcebook, available in paper form in our office or as a downloadable PDF from the MICA Career Development webpage, will help you begin your search for competitive opportunities and provides information on how to format your applications. In addition to this resource, other services available to MICA students and alumni include proposal writing information, editing, application preparation support, and portfolio review. Career Center staff have a tremendous track record in assisting successful applicants to some of the worlds most competitive and prestigious programs.

LINKEDIN AND FACEBOOK

MICA alumni and the Center for Career Development are using LinkedIn and Facebook to stay connected online, share information about job openings, calls for entry, and upcoming exhibitions. Joining the MICA Alumni group on LinkedIn and your regional Alumni Group on Facebook can greatly expand your personal and professional networks and can create career opportunities.

WEEKLY WORKSHOPS AND SPECIAL PROGRAMMING

Check the Program Calendar, found at www.MICA.edu/careerdevelopment, each semester for the dates and locations of upcoming professional development workshops, guest speakers and panel presentations. Career Development programs are free and open to alumni.
7 STEPS TO JOB HUNTING SUCCESS

1. KNOW YOURSELF
If you are still unsure of how you can translate your MICA education into a career, there is no need to panic because you are not alone. It’s not only art school graduates that struggle with the transition from student to professional. A great way to begin is by taking some time to think about your unique skill set, knowledge base, experience and personal goals.

- What technical skills have you mastered?
- What computer programs and special tools or equipment have you become familiar with?
- What makes you unique from other job candidates?
- What job, internship or project experience have you acquired; which aspects of each have you enjoyed the most?
- Where would you like to live?
- What type of work environment is appealing to you?

By creating a list of all that you have to offer in terms of skills, knowledge, and experience, and by understanding the elements that are most important to you in a job setting, you will have a clearer picture of where to focus your job search. If you are still uncertain of positions or titles to which you could apply your skill set, take a look at the Careers in the Arts handout in the Online Career Resources Library.

2. UPDATE YOUR PROFESSIONAL PACKAGE
By the time you’ve graduate you should have all of the following materials prepared, but as you begin your job search remember to update and refine your materials so they are tailored for each specific application. Visit the Online Career Resources Library to download the Building Resumes, Cover Letters, Artist Statements and Bio, or Building a Website handouts.

- Resume
  Keep your resume up to date with current work experiences. Note your technical skills as well as personal strengths such as communication, organization and self-motivation. Design a layout and presentation to reflect your visual communication style.

- Cover Letter
  Your cover letter is an example of your written communication skills. Tailor each letter to emphasize your most relevant and transferable skills. Always be positive in your language and remember to show them what you know about them!

- Artist Bio and Artist Statement
  Update these to reflect your current body of work and achievements. Your bio should be written in the third person and should list all of your accomplishments and career highlights- a summarized narrative version of your artist resume. Your Artist Statement should be 1-3 paragraphs detailing your work and should supplement your portfolio, providing information that may not immediately come across when viewing the work.

- Portfolio and/or Website
  Continue to document new work as you make it. Your portfolio should reflect your current level of ability. The images in your portfolio should be clear and well lit, cropped close to the frame with no distracting backgrounds, and organized to begin and end with impact. Tailor your portfolio to reflect the work that best represents your desired skill set and abilities for each position, and research the best presentation method for each situation.
3. SEARCH AND RESEARCH

MICA Resources

- www.MICAnetwork.com
  MICAnetwork is our free online database listing opportunities from employers across the United States who are actively looking to hire MICA students and alumni.

- www.MICAcareerfair.wordpress.com
  This blog documents the last 4 years of MICA career fair employer participants and can be searched by industry and major. This can be a great place to find creative organizations in the Baltimore/DC area and each listing includes live links to employer websites and short company profiles.

- www.delicious.com/micacareerdevelopment
  Delicious is an online book marking tool where we save all of our favorite art and design links. There are currently over 100 links tagged as Job Search and we are adding more all of the time.

Online Job Banks & Directories

- Take advantage of the many art and design specific job banks and directories such as:
  - www.artjob.org
  - www.creativehotlist.com
  - www.coroflot.com
  - http://jobbank.artsusa.org
  - www.art-collecting.com
  For more industry specific online job banks look to pages 6-10.

4. UTILIZE YOUR NETWORK

The Breakdown

75% of jobs are found through person-to-person networking.
12% are found via the classifieds, newspapers and the Internet.
8% are found using employment agencies and search firms.
5% are found through the direct approach of cold calling and writing letters.

Alumni, Faculty and Industry Professionals

- Approach alumni, faculty and other industry professionals as mentors. MICA alumni can be especially generous with their time and advice. Don’t be afraid to ask for an informational interview to learn more about entering the field and industry tips- these people were once recent graduates in need of some guidance too.

- Consider joining professional organizations in your field or attending industry conferences to make new contacts and expand your network.

Online Social Networking

- Develop a professional profile in LinkedIn and join the MICA Alumni LinkedIn group. LinkedIn can be an invaluable research tool in finding out about career opportunities in your desired field, and to connect with alumni working in an industry or organization you want to learn about.

  www.LinkedIn.com

  Clean up any pre-existing social media profiles. If an employer were to Google search your name, would they find embarrassing photos or information about you? Your online presence should be professional and reflect positively on your work and personal life.

  www.facebook.com
  http://twitter.com
5. DEVELOP A PLAN & BE PERSISTENT

- Create and maintain a database of employers to track your contacts, dates of applications, responses and interviews.
- Make contact to request formal or informational interviews.
- Once you have made contact, be sure to follow up. Following up shows sincere interest and initiative.
- If you are granted an interview, ALWAYS send a thank you note!

Dealing with Rejection

- If you have reached out twice, yet still haven’t received a response, move on to the next opportunity.
- If you are receiving tons of rejection letters or not getting any response to the many applications you submit, give Career Development a call. We can help you refine your search and update your materials to make the most of your efforts.

6. BECOME A STRONGER CANDIDATE

If you are seeing a lot of job openings that sound interesting to you, but feeling that you are not yet qualified for the position, you may need to consider getting some more work experience as an intern or pursuing further education to acquire the knowledge and skills that you lack.

Build Experience

- Take a position as an intern, a volunteer or administrative assistant to gain on-the-job experience and expand your professional network. This type of position may not be glamorous but will get your foot in the door so you can show them what you are capable of.

Acquire the Knowledge and Skills

- Acquire technical and computer software skills by attending workshops or taking continuing education classes.
- Attend MICA programs or Continuing Studies events that can help you improve your professional practices, learn tricks of the trade, and enhance your knowledge of the field.
- Determine if graduate school or further education is a necessary step in your career path.

7. MAKE THE MOST OF CAREER DEVELOPMENT

1. Schedule an appointment with one of the staff in Career Development to have your resume, cover letter and other professional package materials reviewed. As a MICA alumni, our services are available to you anytime.
2. Learn about career building resources like LinkedIn and how to utilize them to make the most of your job search.
3. Discuss past experiences and stumbling blocks to get feedback on how to improve your outcomes.
4. Brainstorm career opportunities, new directions and learn about upcoming professional development workshops.

MARKETING YOURSELF

Knowing how to market yourself is probably the most important skill for any artist or designer. The amount of opportunities available to you is largely a product of those you know, and those who know you. Outlined below are several different ways to market yourself. Never underestimate the importance of keeping in touch, and staying “in the loop!”

BUSINESS CARDS AND POSTCARDS

These are both an effective and useful way to be remembered. Business cards are not only a reminder of who you are (name, email, phone #, website) but they also show off your design skills and aesthetic. Postcards are a great way to advertise for an exhibition opening and ensure that your guests can go home with a piece of your “work.” A postcard has “shelf life” and might speak for you months after your show, as people will pin them up if they like the image. Don’t underestimate the power of a strong postcard! Below are a few suggested ways to print business cards and postcards:

In the Baltimore area:

- www.federalhillprinting.com (located in Federal Hill and Owings Mills)
- www.indigoinkprint.com (located in Columbia)

WEB PRESENCE

Do you have an online portfolio, website or blog? An online presence is extremely important in today’s fast-paced world. If you are tech savvy, and studying web/graphic design or interactive design, you should consider building a website to display your work. Not only is this a great way to showcase your work, but the website itself will speak for your design skills and technical abilities. If you come from a more fine art background, and do not yet have the skills to build a website, consider starting a blog with a user-friendly site (free), or use a paid service to host your domain name and provide easy, user-friendly templates. Some suggested sites are:

- www.portfolios.mica.edu
- MICA Portfolios is an exclusive network just for MICA students and alumni at no cost

CAREER FAIRS
Career Fairs offer a great opportunity to network and make face-to-face connections with potential employers. MICA holds an annual Internship + Career Fair that takes place in the spring semester. Visit www.micacareerfair.wordpress.com for information on past and future fairs. Below are some important things to remember when preparing for and attending a career fair.

• Plan ahead: Find out which organizations, companies, or galleries will be represented. Decide which employers you're interested in and visit their websites to learn more about them and any available job before the career fair.

• Dress the part: Career fairs can offer you “on-the-spot” interviewing, which could be your one opportunity to make a professional and lasting impression so, make sure you are dressed professionally. As art students it is okay to show some style and creativity, just know your audience.

• Treat it like a job interview: Be prepared to communicate your qualifications in a 30-second “elevator speech” including a few selling points about yourself but make sure it doesn’t sound canned.

• Establish contact: Your objective is to make a lasting impression before you leave the table. Be pleasant and express interest in the company. Pick up a business card and follow up the next day while you are fresh in their minds.

• Follow up: Re-establish contact via phone or email and inquire about an opportunity to interview. This is no time to be shy. Follow-up contact will put you on top of the candidate pile.

EXHIBITION OPENINGS
Exhibition openings are a great way to stay connected to the local art scene, and offer opportunities to network with emerging and established artists, art enthusiasts, and potential collectors. You can learn also about upcoming exhibit opportunities and other art-related events at openings.

PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATIONS
Professional affiliations are another way to meet people and professionals related to the art and design world. Most professional associations and trade organizations have student memberships. Make the most of your membership by becoming active, getting on committees and becoming a valuable part of the organization. By doing this, you will become more visible and well known to the other members, while learning a lot about your field.

TALK TO YOUR PROFESSORS
Do you ever think, “If only I knew someone in the field who could help me get started…” well, you do! MICA’s faculty is among the top ranked in the nation, coming from exceptional professional backgrounds and stellar graduate programs. Many students have found internships, jobs, and started building professional networks through their professors. So, don’t be shy, a direct connection to the art world is at your fingertips.

GET INVOLVED
Participate in activities and/or organizations that interest you such as volunteer or charitable organizations, art-related or other groups/clubs including alumni, political, or recreational related activities – you never know whom you will meet!
1. LEARN ABOUT THE ORGANIZATION
   • Know the name and title of the person whom you will be talking to.
   • What does the company do?
   • What products or services do they provide?
   • Who are their clients?
   • Are there any MICA alumni working for the company?
   • Ask Yourself:
     Would I be happy working for this company and their client list for the next 3-5 years?
     Are the core values and beliefs of this company in line with my own?

2. REVIEW YOUR QUALIFICATIONS FOR THE JOB
   • Be prepared to speak about your skills and abilities.
   • How has your educational background and/or previous work experience prepared you for this position?
   • How do your accomplishments compliment the company’s goals?

3. PREPARE YOUR PORTFOLIO
   • Update your portfolio with your newest and best work.
   • Make sure all images are crisp and clear, and begin and end with strong images.
   • Research the best method of presentation for your discipline.
   • Tailor your portfolio for each individual company.

4. LOOK THE PART
   Your personal appearance is a compliment to your work. Make sure you dress appropriately for the industry and slightly better than the people in the field do on a day-to-day basis. Be well groomed and do not chew gum or smoke. Stay aware of your body language. Good posture, direct eye contact and a firm handshake will show that you are confident and serious about the position.

5. GENERAL ETIQUETTE
   • Arrive early
     Do whatever it takes to be there early or at least on time.
   • Turn off your cell phone
     Double check that your ringer is off. Try to avoid this, but if you MUST check your phone during the interview, politely excuse yourself at an appropriate time.
   • Stay positive
     Remember that you are being evaluated throughout the interview process and especially during “casual” conversation. They want to learn about your character as well as your skills and experience. Keep your responses positive and avoid being overly critical or negative when speaking about previous jobs or employers.
   • Bring extra copies of your resume and business cards
• Bring a note pad
Be prepared to take notes and jot down questions as you think of them.

• Be yourself!
Try to stay relaxed and let them see your real personality. Don’t exaggerate your skills or knowledge, rather offer an eagerness to learn what is needed to get the job. If they don’t appreciate you for who you are, it’s probably not the right fit for you.

6. THEIR QUESTIONS
Frequently asked questions:
• Tell us about yourself and why did you apply for this position?
• Can you describe your educational and professional background?
• Can you name 1-2 of your most important accomplishments?
• Which aspects of the job description do you think will present the biggest challenge?
• What are your long term career goals?
• Is there anything that isn’t on your resume that you’d like to share?
A more complete list of frequently asked interview questions can be found in Career Development. We also offer mock interviews to help you prepare for upcoming interviews.

7. YOUR QUESTIONS
Employers expect candidates to have questions of their own. Asking questions can serve to clarify issues or concerns about the position, as well as indicate interest.
You may want to ask:
• Can you describe your ideal candidate?
• What is a typical day like?
• Who will be my direct supervisor?
• How and by whom is performance measured?
The questions you ask show that you have done research about the organization and the staff. Keep your questions polite and thoughtful, and don’t ask unless you are really interested in the answer.

8. FOLLOW UP
After the interview, send a thank you note- either hand written or by email. Make sure to mention 1-2 key points from the interview but keep it short and sincere, and send it within 48 hours of the interview.
• Thank them for their time.
• Remind them of everything you have to offer the company and refer to something you discussed during the interview.
• Reiterate your interest in the opportunity.
• Finish by stating that you look forward to hearing from them soon.
9. SALARY NEGOTIATIONS

- Wait until an offer is made
  Take time to research average salaries or compensations for comparable industry positions in the region, and to calculate how much you need to be making. Don’t bring up the issue of pay and benefits during an interview, but before you leave, ask about the next steps and time line for the hiring process.

- Never go first
  Once the interviewer confirms that they are interested in hiring you, they may ask you what kind of salary you are looking for. You should first ask them what range they have allocated for the position. Avoid naming a number when possible.

- Negotiating
  If the offer is too low, suggest a higher figure, but within reason. In order to negotiate effectively, you must know how much you NEED to make, and industry standards for the position. Avoid suggesting figures that are drastically out of step and think about how badly you want the position. If an agreement cannot be reached immediately, avoid saying "NO" out right and give yourself some time to consider the details, and allow them to perhaps make a better offer. It’s perfectly acceptable to ask an employer for time to think it over.

- Consider the offer
  If an acceptable salary is offered, avoid accepting the job until you have all of the details on benefits, bonuses and relocation expenses if necessary. All of these factor into compensation and can add up over time. Give yourself time to think about if this is the right job for you. Sometimes it is better to turn down a sure thing in order to find the right thing.

- Benefits
  In addition to salary, review the benefits, perks and company culture. If you’re not sure about the benefits that are offered, ask for additional information or clarification. Learn the details on health and life insurance coverage, vacation, sick time, disability, and other benefit programs. Inquire about how much of the benefits costs are provided by the company, in full, and how much you will be expected to contribute. The culture of the company can play a big factor in overall job satisfaction as well. If flexibility in your schedule is important to you, take time to talk to current employees about company policy.

- Accepting the job
  Once an agreement has been made and you are clear on all of the details, you can accept the offer. Before you may begin working, you will need to present photo identification and your social security card, and may be asked to undergo a background check. You should also inform any other employers who may be considering you as a candidate that you would like to withdraw your application from consideration.

IN CLOSING

Identifying and settling into a career that matches your passions and experience isn’t always easy. So much depends on interests, personalities, timing and luck. Take time to identify where your true passions and talents lie, do plenty of research on your intended industry and potential employers, and this will only increase your chances of finding that “dream job.” Remember that your major doesn’t necessarily equal your career, and learning does take place outside of the classroom. The staff at the Joseph Meyerhoff Center for Career Development is here to help you at every step along the way. We look forward to assisting you and sharing in your success.
